As "developed" countries around the world continue to whitewash their official COVID inquiries and deny the obvious relationship between "vaccination" and increased mortality, I wonder what they will do when (not if) another country finally admits the truth. Philippines seems to be a front runner at this moment. - Joel Smalley

explosive hearing unfolded at the Philippines' use of Representatives, focusing on the concerning increase of over 290,000 excess deaths. people start to connect the dots to the roll-out experimental vaccines, heated discussions ensued, revealing shocking testimonies and data.

Senator Tanya Lat voiced the frustrations of many Filipinos: "There are Filipino people who are sick and tired of how the DOH has let us down, has refused to admit that people are dying, turning a blind eye to the people who are getting sick, tuberculosis, myocarditis, children who are suddenly sick if they are 60, 70-year-old people." Her words resonated in the chamber, painting a grim picture of a Department of Health (DOH) that seems indifferent to the suffering caused by the vaccines. "We look into their eyes, there does not seem to be any sympathy for the people who have died, for the people who are now physically disabled because of these vaccines," she added.

e tension continued as analyst Sally Clark presented alarming statistics: "This is our birth rate. And it shows that we have had a loss of babies every single year since the pandemic has started. So 2019 was our last normal birth year. And the last one at the bottom is 2023."

When she dissected the data, it became clear that there was a notable and troubling pattern: birth rates are dropping significantly. This data shares similar patterns to those of highly vaccinated countries like Singapore, where they saw a surge in stillbirths and perinatal deaths.

regarding the number of deaths, Sally explained, "The very big spike is the deaths in 2021, which started in March of 2021, immediately consecutive to the start of the vaccine rollout." Clark emphasized the significant increase in deaths during July and August 2021, which coincided with e Janssen vaccine rollout. "In 2021, when vaccination rolled out, the deaths went up in all the groups that were vaccinated."

House Chairman Dan Fernandez amplified the urgency of the situation, stating, "And that's the reason why the chair believes that there is really a correlation between these two." His statement underscored a sentiment growing among representatives that the excess deaths were not incidental but linked to the vaccination efforts.

Congressman Zia Alonto Adiong, added a critical insight about the pharmaceutical companies' legal protections: "There's really an agreement that dictates that they cannot be sued. So I mean, that's something that we should worry about." He questioned the logic behind such agreements if the vaccines were indeed as safe as claimed. "Why would pharmaceutical company insist on not being sued if there will be injuries or fatalities that may come later as a result of that?"

We've been a part of that mistake"

The hearing reached a pivotal moment when House Chairman Dan Fernandez acknowledged past legislative errors: "We've been a part of that mistake because we approved the law that mandate the pharmaceutical to be responsible. And now we learn from that mistake." His words echoed a commitment to rectify legislative oversights, signaling a path forward. "Moving forward, we will correct the mistakes," he assured.
