

You Will Have A Daily Water Allowance

One shower a day, no lawns, limited gardens. The state will meter it all

ELIZABETH NICKSON

JUN 10, 2024

250

100

35

Share

Not if the U.N. has anything to say about it.

At this juncture our governments are just nominal. We all take our orders for legislation from the U.N. that sends out sheafs of "suggested" regulation for all ministries and departments large and small. If a legislator or bureaucrat decides, "Hell, no, I'm not going to do that," he or she is immediately assaulted by several of the NGO's that operate in whichever concerned sphere of influence, first gently, then a bit more influence is brought. If he insists, the poodle media is unleashed by a "study" that "shows" that women and minorities are hardest hit, and the legislator or bureaucrat is tamed.

Where I live – an excellent case study for the hellscape of our meticulously planned future – people get elected promising reform, and within weeks surrender. Any change he tries to muscle through will invite lawsuits as far as the eye can see. It will cost millions. Since the legislation is boilerplate, there is no room for local considerations. This is walking insanity, and has created unimaginable unnecessary pain. It has foreshortened lives, prevented economic activity, and destroyed opportunity. It is straight-up stupid and cruel.

Let's take a closer look at the bars of our prison. First you have U.N. treaties. Our governments have signed hundreds upon hundreds of them, committing to a new green future. The following is the PR:

With these new actions, President Biden is delivering on the most ambitious land and water conservation agenda in American history. These actions build on more than two years of the Biden-Harris Administration's progress and historic investments to advance conservation, restoration, and stewardship nationwide. That record includes:

- Protecting more lands and waters in his first year than any president since JFK
- Setting the country's first-ever national conservation goal to conserve at least 30 percent of U.S. lands and waters by 2030
- Signing an Executive Order to better protect America's forests
- Securing the largest investment in climate, environmental justice, and conservation ever
- Putting the entire U.S. Arctic Ocean off limits to new oil and gas development
- Restoring and strengthening protections for cherished places, including Bears Ears, Grand Staircase-Escalante, and Northeast Canyons and Seamounts National Monuments, as well as the Tongass National Forest
- Designating the Camp Hale - Continental Divide National Monument in Colorado
- FACT SHEET: Biden-Harris Administration Takes New Action to Conserve and Restore America's Lands and Waters

Take a look at the list of things 'saved'. Note that it locks away thousands of square miles of ocean from drilling or fishing. What it doesn't say is that the Waters of the United States gives the government control of every run-off ditch and puddle. This massive taking, which will, by the end of it remove one billion acres from American use, locks up pretty much any and all natural resources, on the grounds of "scarcity." Every single order and legislative initiative hews to this one idea: humans are killing the earth and we are running out of everything except sun and wind, which is the future and you better get used to brownouts.

NGO's proffer "proof" that set-asides create prosperity, but if you examine the "proof", it is boilerplate for every set-aside, the prosperity is in 'service' jobs, which they claim are doctors and engineers, but which are really summer waitress and checkout cashiers. Real jobs, the ones that build families, decline. The only increase is tourism and that would have come anyway.

This inversion of reality is creates the most astonishing clusterfuck of incompetence and cruelty. Last weekend the city of Philadelphia took three days to notify 14 million people that their water was tainted by a spill from a factory. California, which had been in a "drought" for the last 20 years until the recent spate of torrential rains (not "climate change" but part of the West's natural boom-or-bust water cycle), has meant that farmers and ranchers in California, literally a bread basket for the nation, have been deliberately starved of water.

For 150 years, the western states engaged in building what I consider to be the Eighth Wonder of the World, the water system that could feed, clothe and house the known universe. For the past 25 years, the environmental movement, guided by the U.N. and Rockefeller, Ford, and a half dozen other pernicious foundations, has been breaking that water system. More than one thousand significant dams have been taken out, and thousands upon thousands of little dams and weirs in the upland ranges and forests have been removed. The result this has been, and its purpose is, to starve human development, food production, and economic well-being.

In fact, California has plenty of water. It is hidden and masterfully. In my book, Eco-Fascists, How Radical Environmentalists Are Destroying Our Natural Heritage, one of my later chapters declares that the takings of the United Nations, in every single country, are primarily focused on locking up water. Without water, everything dies. Controlling water means you control everything. Water, of course, is a renewable resource. But the U.N. declares it is not. Because “global warming” means everything is going to dry out.

Green watershed management is crazy-expensive. A town of 4,000 will spend $500,000 just on the planning alone. Green watershed management sends water first to "wetlands" rather than to reservoirs and then seas or lakes. A lot of the sudden catastrophic flooding of cities in the past ten years has to do with the built-in incompetencies of green watershed management.

Kevin Kiley, a young legislator in California, took this battle to the floor, showing California drought restrictions on the one hand, and a video of 20,000 cubic feet of water pouring into the ocean every second. If you are a rancher or a farmer anywhere west of the Mississippi, you have four meters on your well from each state and federal agency and any infraction means a fine of tens of thousands of dollars.

I live in a rainforest. On my land I have enough water for 80 families. When I sold my house at the top of the hill, a new owner spent $50,000 on a water catchment system. He had been told by authorities that he was going to run out of water. At the north end of my island, again, in a rainforest, green watershed management has meant that everyone pays ten thousand a year for water, their gardens are minimal and any excess use means a visit and fines. This year, the taxes on that water tripled.

How did this happen? It was subterfuge, the foolish were blandished, the media was bought, anyone objecting was silenced and cancelled, government at all levels was bullied, and every single resource we need to create an abundant world was stolen in the night. As the Bolsheviks famously put it: Who? Whom? It's them or us.

info@freedomdefenseresourcecenter.com

Subscribe

Please consider a very cheap annual subscription. I am so so grateful for the paid (and other subscriptions) over the past month. And messages from subscribers who pay are so encouraging, so uplifting, I find myself too abashed to reply my thanks, so herewith, you are the wind beneath my wings, and sometime cliches say the necessary better than anything..

info@freedomdefenseresourcecenter

Subscribe

Elizabeth Nickson was trained as a reporter at the London bureau of Time Magazine. She became European Bureau Chief of LIFE magazine in its last years of monthly publication, and during that time, acquired the rights to Nelson Mandela's memoir before he was released from Robben Island. She went on to write for Harper's Magazine, the Guardian, the Observer, the Independent, the Sunday Telegraph, the Sunday Times Magazine, the Telegraph, the Globe and Mail and the National Post. Her first book The Monkey Puzzle Tree was an investigation of the CIA MKULTRA mind control program and was published by Bloomsbury and Knopf Canada. Her next book, Eco-Fascists, How Radical Environmentalists Are Destroying Our Natural Heritage, was a look at how environmentalism, badly practiced, is destroying the rural economy and rural culture in the U.S. and all over the world. It was published by Adam Bellow at Harper Collins US. You can read in depth policy papers about various elements of the environmental junta here: <https://independent.academia.edu/ElizabethNickson>

250 Likes · 35 Restacks

100 Comments

Write a comment...

Mick From Hooe (UK) Mick's Newsletter Jun 10

Crackpot Gates has already got his dirty little mits into the US drinking water and US land opportunities. He will want to make money from every one of us to enjoy access to his recourses.

Water will become scarce and meat will become unaffordable - thereby justifying his other angles for plundering humanity with his ARTIFICIAL Meats.

He has been playing with climate for years and experiments with artificial droughts and floods.

This maniac knows no boundaries to his opportunism to enslave us all with threats of starvation and death from thirst.

Unjabbed Mick (UK) Unjabbed I'll live longer to fight those who mean us no good!

♡ LIKE (22) ◻ REPLY ↗ SHARE ...

5 replies

Rather Curmudgeonly Curmudgeonly Contemplations Jun 10

As a native Californian I do get to register a note of dissent about water policy in the state. It has always been stupid, so the latest stupid is just part of tradition there. Farmers there are known for growing water intensive crops in dry lands (desert) because they were traditionally given all-but-free water. And we aren't even talking food crops, but thing like alfalfa and cotton. They put up signs about how they feed America, right over cotton fields. Even today, water law is mostly unchanged from the 19th century and it can't be changed because of that lobby. You can no more trust them than you can the green idiots.

♡ LIKE (14) ◻ REPLY ↗ SHARE ...

23 replies

98 more comments...