The declaration of Martial Law By South Korean President Yoon Suk Yeol in November of 2024 was largely misunderstood in America and South Korea.

At first glance, it seemed like a return to the bad old days of Military Martial Law in South Korea, and many in America and South Korea accepted the initial narrative put out by corrupt legacy media in the U.S. and South Korea.

Shortly after Martial Law, the country descended into a frenzy of impeachment hysteria against President Yoon and follow-on successors.

South Korea has been one of America’s closest allies since the Korean War of 1950 – 1953 and the subsequent Armistice, still in effect.

All seemed lost in the wake of the Martial Law chaos in November 2024 until South Koreans, many never before involved in politics, assembled in larger and larger numbers, waving South Korean and American flags, made memes and pictures of Yoon and Trump together, and adopted a simple MAGA slogan, “Stop the Steal.”

There was far more to what was going on than being reported by mainstream media in South Korea and America. In the six hours of "Martial Law", which is allowed under the Korean Constitution, President Yoon trusted Police to raid the nefarious National Election Commission (NEC) in Seoul.

No one was killed, injured, or disappeared during this period, but evidence of Election Fraud by the Democrat Party (DPK) of South Korea was secured.

Guess who was providing funding and assistance to the South Korean NEC? That's right – USAID. Mike Benz has pointed out the sinister role of USAID in helping Globalist Communists in Brazil censor media, throw the election, and eventually arrest President Jair Bolsonaro.

The same thing was going on in South Korea, where USAID colluded with leftists such as the Democrat Party of Korea to stop Populists and Conservatives.

In South Korea, President Yoon is the leader of the People's Power Party. The National Assembly, the unicameral Legislative Body in South Korea is controlled by the DPK. The "Make Korea Great Again" activists in South Korea have been aggressively censored by South Korean Media.

The leader of the DPK is Lee Jae-myung. Lee is a hardened, left-leaning politician who describes America as an occupying force and the Chinese and Russians as liberating forces.

This might seem like routine and meaningless hyperbole for an American leftist. In South Korea, use of such terms is incendiary and are fighting words.

These are matters the bought-off, corrupt, mainstream media in South Korea and America routinely fail to report.

In the 2022 and 2024 legislative votes, Lee and the DPK worked closely with Chinese operatives to bring in Chinese election administrators and even Chinese voters.

Dr. Tara O, a retired U.S. Air Force Lieutenant Colonel and a respected Korean expert, observed, "South Koreans are shocked to discover there are 100,000 Chinese citizens who can vote in South Korean regional elections—for provincial governors, city and town mayors, provincial/city/county lawmakers, education superintendents, etc. The corrupt pro-CCP lawmakers made it happen."

Baek Ji-won, is a South Korean Conservative Politician and she has been considered a National Spokesperson for the Stop the Steal movement during this historic upheaval in South Korean governance.

Ji-won pointed out that, "Since March 2022, before President Yoon Seok-yeol's term began, they (the DPK) have carried out more than 180 impeachment incitement rallies, 29 impeachments of the president, prime minister, ministers, prosecutors, and the chairman of the Board of Audit and Inspection and even impeached the Minister of Justice for "looking at" the Democratic Party."

The Democrat Party of South Korea was able to seize control of the National Assembly in 2020 with substantial assistance from the Chinese Communist Party, which Dr. O has reported on extensively.

USAID assistance to the Korean National Election Commission enabled this election fraud.

The unions in South Korea have been militarized by Communist agents. Ji-won added, "The largest labor organization, the Korean Confederation of Trade Unions (Min-no-chong), which is a spy force that colludes with and receives orders from North Korea, is acting as the leader of these actions".

The Chinese and North Koreans have been focused on peeling away South Korea from partnership with the United States and Japan. Ji-won provided details on this part of the Communist strategy, "They (the DPK-controlled legislature) included President Yoon Seok-yeol's contribution to Korea-US-Japan diplomacy as a reason for impeachment and incited the framing of the use of martial law (by Yoon) as an internal rebellion.

However, martial law is the president's authority, and this is not internal rebellion. They suddenly removed the charge of internal rebellion because it seemed difficult to prove internal rebellion. Therefore, the impeachment motion in question is impossible to establish, and it should be dismissed."

The aggressive actions by the DPK have turned public opinion against the DPK, and support for President Yoon and People Power Party have risen significantly above the Democrat Party of Korea.

Paul Sungwon Kim is a South Korean social media influencer who has rallied support for President Yoon and exposed what is really going on, which is a Communist coup.

Facebook, YouTube, and South Korean "X" have worked to silence President Yoon's support. Paul said he is, "raising awareness about the real reason behind the martial law—the growing influence of the Chinese Communist Party in South Korea.

Many young people have already joined the protests. Meanwhile, President Yoon's highly competent legal team has dismantled nearly all the Democratic Party's false accusations against him."

On March 8, the Constitutional Court (like the American Supreme Court) ordered the release of President Yoon. He was welcomed back in a boisterous celebration by a jubilant crowd waving South Korean and American Flags. Lieutenant Colonel Chan Ham is a retired U.S. Army Chaplain and has been on the ground helping in the reporting and the Stop the Steal rallies.

He says, out of the 29 impeachments, eight have been acquitted so far. In the end there is a growing possibility after all this national drama that President Yoon will be returned to the Presidency.

The Korean "Stop the Steal" movement has been the driving force to turn the tide against a Communist plot to steal South Korea from the citizens.
